Froggy Description: Froggy is an application that hides itself in the top-right corner of your screen. Each time a full moon occurs, it lights up its black eyes and moves towards your screen. It will move towards the window of your favorite web browser. By then, you can click on a specific website, open a new tab, or search for a particular word. Then, it will hide its eyes again and wait for the next moon. This application is free to use. Features: Froggy is an application that hides itself in the top-right corner of your screen. Each time a full moon occurs, it lights up its black eyes and moves towards your screen. It will move towards the window of your favorite web browser. By then, you can click on a specific website, open a new tab, or search for a particular word. Then, it will hide its eyes again and wait for the next moon. This application is free to use. Key Features: Hide the top-right corner. Open new web browser tab, or visit an address or search. Option to hide the full moon in 5 days, 7 days, or 15 days. Option to move towards the full moon or not. Simple configuration option. Create several moon cycles with different options for the app to work. Can be used from both of your Desktop PC and Laptop. Can be used from any screen which has space to display the full moon. Froggy is a program that sits quietly in the top-right corner of your screen, watching you. But it's a hard-hearted frog that doesn't always sit still. Its little eyes follow the rotation of your monitor, its sharp ears never lose track of your typing, and its tongue traces the wall of your screen for instant replies. When a full moon falls upon the program, it lightens its eyes, turns its head a bit and sticks out a tongue. Whether you see the full moon, a smudge of light, or just a glint in its eye, you're still the center of its attention. Download Froggy for free at the developer's site, but it will only work if you have a mouse, a monitor, and a keyboard. Updates New Features: Create several moon cycles with different

Rescue private data from end users. KEYMACRO Requires: Version 2.x and newer. IMPORTANT: This upgrade contains a version of the spyware which "will" recognize all private data from all programs (also hidden on the system) and send it to a remote server. Please read the license agreement carefully, so that you don't get your private data stolen. KNOWN ISSUES: 1. Froggy and similar tools might detect all keys pressed on the keyboard, cause the program might be hidden by default in the hidden files of the user. 2. The application might be hidden behind the file menu "File -> Open" of the browser or other programs. 3. If you have both Froggy and Spybot installed on the same computer, the application might only work for Spybot and not for Froggy. 4. If you have both Froggy and Spybot installed on the same computer, the application might be hidden behind the file menu "File -> Open" of the browser or other programs. 5. Other issue... User Reviews I like the idea of it, but I don't think it works. I have used it for a week and I couldn't get it to work after disabling it. Once it starts, the window is really hard to close. If I click "don't ask me again" the warning about it is either disabled or the program goes into weird mode where it changes the desktop icons and puts itself on the top of the screen. It's a big mess and it won't work. - i like it a lot, but i'm using firefox with its firebug and it crashes if you have a lot of plugins. maybe it's a problem with this combination, but i tried it with opera and there's no problem (at least it seems to be it...) I know this is an old topic, but i just installed this and i think it's pretty cool. You need to use a browser like Firefox (obviously) to install this... it's really nice. I made a video showing it in action... i guess you need a java enabled browser to use it. I know this is an old topic, but i just installed this and i think it's pretty cool.
